

For Immediate Release

West Virginia Bankers Association Appoints Mark Mangano as President and Chief Executive Officer

Charleston, WV - The West Virginia Bankers Association (WVBankers) is pleased to announce Mark Mangano has been named President and Chief Executive Officer. Mark will be succeeding the retiring President and CEO, Sara 'Sally' Cline, effective February 28, 2023.

"The West Virginia Bankers Association is fortunate to have a person with Mark's experience and talents join our organization," said Jim King, WVBankers Chairman of the Board. "Mark will be a great advocate for West Virginia Banking, and we are very excited to see Mark lead this great organization."

Mangano brings a broad range of professional experience to the association. As a West Virginia native, Mangano is deeply committed to supporting the healthy banking industry forged during his 27 years as a West Virginia community bank CEO. During his time as an attorney at Jackson Kelly PLLC, his practice centered on serving financial institutions and focused on strategic planning facilitation, board consulting, regulatory matters, and transactions.

Mark's extensive background will continue to lead banks in supporting communities, expanding economic opportunities, and improving the lives of countless West Virginia families.

"I am looking forward to helping the association build on its tradition of excellence in advocacy, education, and leadership and supporting the association's talented and committed staff," stated Mangano.

###

The West Virginia Bankers Association, founded in 1891 and headquartered in Charleston, represents the state's financial institutions and their employees. The Association provides continuing education, develops and monitors state and federal legislative agendas, distributes information on all components of the financial industry, and promotes the public image of West Virginia's banking industry. The mission of WVBankers is to represent and support its members, enabling them to provide a full range of quality financial products and services to benefit the communities they serve.